

LOG OF THE S.S. THE MRS. UNGUENTINE

Forty years ago I first linked up with Unguentine and we made love on twin-hulled catamarans, sails a-billow, bless the seas... So begins the courtship of a certain Unguentine to the woman we know only as Mrs. Unguentine, the chronicler of their sad, fantastical tale. For forty years, they sail the seas together,...

Peek Inside the Book

Finally when he climbed below deck after dark, wondering where his dinner was, perhaps with a storm come up and rough seas and blinding rains, I'd sulk and lure him into the warm...

So that where I once did not know who or what you were, now I wonder who I or we are, or what. What planet is this anyway, my dear? Stanley Crawford, Log of the S.S. the Mrs. Unguentine //

Reader's Opinions

Meaty language and an intriguing concept/characters, but the execution was confusing as much as it was anything. As the reader, I was trying to figure out the Truths of this world, but it felt like they kept changing. I'd love to see an illustrated timeline for all the action of this story because it didn't consistently make sense in...

A drunken Mr. Unguentine falls from the railing of the barge, thus ending a forty year marriage that began with a night of love on a catamaran and was consecrated via Transatlantic cable. He and Mrs. Unguentine, who narrates the story, have lived on their married life on the barge, sailing the seas to avoid extreme seasons, and after...
