

FAMILY MATTERS

Nariman Vakeel, a seventy-nine-year-old Parsi widower, beset by Parkinson's disease and haunted by memories of the past, lives in a once-elegant apartment with his two middle-aged stepchildren. When his condition worsens he is forced to take up residence with Roxana, his own daughter, her husband, Yezad, and their two young sons. The effect of the new responsibility on Yezad, who is already besieged by financial worries, pushes him into a scheme of...

Peek Inside the Book

The photographs had made him aware how much the street and the buildings meant to him. Like an extended family that hed taken for granted and ignored, assuming it would always be there. But buildings and roads and...

Reader's Opinions

This book did for me what Suketu Mehta's "Bombay. Maximum City" couldn't - I could see, smell and feel the mega-city throughout the pages of this both realistic and nostalgic novel. I suppose that also my inability to thoroughly enjoy non-fiction plays a role in this, I just need characters and plot to stay interested through a thick...
